

RECOGNITION

We offer dedicated opportunities for individuals, organisations and companies to be recognised for their contribution to the water industry. We promote the achievements of our members and allow them to build their personal and corporate profiles.

Australian Water Awards Program

We offer a range of awards at both state and national levels as part of our Australian Water Awards Program which plays an important role in promoting the contribution our members make to the industry and the community. The awards not only seek to recognise and reward outstanding achievement of individuals and organisations in the water sector, but also to identify those who have displayed conspicuous service to the profession and exceptional performance in the practice of water management. Winners of state and territory award categories become finalists in the national awards which are announced each year at the Ozwater Gala Dinner. Award finalists and winners are profiled significantly across our print and digital communications and platforms.

Member News

Our digital and print platforms are where we promote the news and achievements of our members. We can write news articles about your company's latest water projects, share your water resources on our social media pages, and update the rest of the industry on awards or bids you have won in our weekly e-newsletter, Source. Our Current magazine profiles the innovative work our members are engaged in across the sector, while our State Source newsletters profile the latest news and updates specific to local members.

Paper Submission

Our individual members have year-round opportunities to build their personal profiles, particularly through submission of technical papers to any of our state or national conferences, or our online technical paper publication, Water e-Journal. Presenting your research paper or case study at a conference is one of the best ways to profile your work to the rest of the industry, whether an article about your upcoming presentation is written in the lead up to the conference, or your name and presentation title is shared via our social media pages. Presenting at Ozwater, our annual water conference, gives you the best opportunity to build your personal profile on a national platform. Submitting your research or case study to the Water e-Journal gives you exposure to our entire membership plus newsletter subscribers as technical papers are featured in our weekly newsletter, Source.

International Branding

Through our international relationships we have outreach across more than 45,000 international water sector professionals from across 15 countries, providing opportunities for your company to be profiled to a global audience. International business profiling opportunities include public private partnerships, joint venture opportunities, and collaboration on major water projects. We create a platform for which Australian skills and capabilities can be easily accessed, utilised and shared globally. Through delegations to large international water conferences, we focus on building the international branding of the Australian water industry, growing local business capability and increasing industry exports.

Australian and New Zealand Biosolids Partnership

We manage the Australian and New Zealand Biosolids Partnership (ANZBP), a member-based group consisting of organisations committed to the sustainable management of biosolids. The ANZBP provides factual information about biosolids; how they are produced; what is in them; how they might be used; their benefits and potential risks associated with their use.
